

Acknowledgements

Conversion of my thoughts of gratitude to written words marks the end of yet another editorial year. At this moment, as I sit facing a blank page and look through my mind's eye at my companions of the past year, I am reminded of how many there are to whom I owe a debt of gratitude.

First, I would like to thank the Dean of the Faculty of Law, Prof. Sinai Deutch, who time and again gave me his blessing when I initiated a new activity. Second, my warm gratitude goes to the dear members of the editorial board. A vigorous, intelligent, enthusiastic, and dedicated group of students, young and younger, who sought to improve each article that came to the editorial board, including the articles that were rejected.

Warm thanks to the associate editors, Daniel (Vadim) Ansky, Vered Levinzon-Borochoy, and Harel Turgeman. Your help, which was provided also in difficult moments, was invaluable. Special thanks are in order to the member of the editorial board, Erez Alush, who directs the external relations of the board with a strong hand, organizes conferences, and manages our lively Facebook page.

It is difficult to find words to express my third debt of gratitude, which I owe to Monica Kushnir, the legendary coordinator of Mozanei Mishpat. Her energy, the light in her eyes, her smile, and her organizational ability are immensely beneficial to the work of the board and make it continuous fun.

I am also grateful to the administrative staff who assist us and are always cheerful, especially Hanna Forer, Administration Director of the Faculty, for her wise advice; Orly Gafer, for her assistance with graphics; Amly Sides, for her help with organization; and Yariv Zarbib, for his dedicated help in managing our page on the college website.

Finally, I wish to thank Guy Preminger, whose language editing is always an enlightening lesson in the intricacies of the Hebrew language.

Thank you, my friends. You made the editorial journey pleasant, challenging, and full of smiles.